

Section 3.2.5: Other

Occasionally, state or local governments, other organizations, or individuals may offer state agencies other resources in the form of training, technical assistance, or donations (cash, goods, or services). State agencies must adhere to established state and agency procedures when receiving such assistance. This includes proper accounting for and compliance with all statutory requirements and intended purposes for which those resources are offered and received. The grant program manager must ensure there is no conflict of interest with the entity offering the resource(s) nor is there any other prohibition on receiving such resources. The grant program manager for the agency receiving these resources must establish the organization providing the resources as the grantor in all internal records, including eCivis.
